The Marvelous Work of

THE ROBBINS SPEECH AND

HEARING CLINIC

OF EMERSON COLLEGE

Jessie Southwick Ross

and

DeHaven Ross

Riverside, Connecticut

AID to SPEECH THERAPY

was formed during the winter of 1952-53 as the Women's Committee of Emerson College. In the fall of 1963, the Samuel D. Robbins Speech and Hearing Clinic had opened its doors at the College. The Clinic and the Committee formed a natural pair, and it was not long until the Committee became Aid to Speech Therapy.

Since the founding of the Robbins Clinic, Aid to Speech Therapy has been helping to support this organization. Since its inception, the Clinic has provided diagnosis and treatment of speech and hearing disorders to thousands of children and adults. And since 1953, Aid to Speech Therapy has been active in raising funds for the Clinic, so that even more people may be helped.

One out of every ten children of school age in Massachusetts suffers from some form of speech or hearing impairment, and many of these are seen at the Robbins Clinic.

Through Aid to Speech Therapy, the Robbins Clinic has been provided with such invaluable equipment as the Audiometric Testing Room at the Clinic, as well as treatment and observation rooms fitted with one-way glass, and portable hearing aids for audiological evaluation. In addition, members of Aid to Speech Therapy work as volunteers at the Clinic.

Membership in Aid to Speech Therapy now stands at several hundred interested men and women. There are well over one hundred life members of the organization.

Aid to Speech Therapy is sponsoring a benefit performance of the 1964 Emerson musical comedy. Some of the proceeds from the Friday evening performance of Carnival will go to assist the invaluable work of the Robbins Clinic.

The job will be a long, difficult one. But with every person who is helped to take his place in a speaking, hearing society, the task of the Robbins Clinic and Aid to Speech Therapy will be one step closer to completion.

As Thomas Mann said, "The word . . . preserves contact. It is silence which isolates."

THE BUSINESS ADVISORY COUNCIL

Among the Sponsors of this performance of Carnival are the members of the Business Advisory Council of Emerson College. This group was formed in February, 1963, under the chairmanship of Mr. Sidney Kaye, and the vice-chairmanship of Mr. Paul L. Beane. The Council meets once a month and provides generous amounts of time and talent to help Emerson College assume its full share of responsibility in the education of America's young people. During this past year the Council has provided a Bekesey Audiometer to the Clinic, which has helped to further broaden the range of the Clinic's facilities. The Council promotes greater understanding and support from the Greater Boston business community.
